VI-Reading Comprehension & Summary Making (60 marks)

Read the following passage carefully, then answer the questions below:

Most children in poor countries don't have enough food to eat. They don't have the fancy clothes, toys and other things that children of more developed countries have. Instead of going to school to gain a good education, children in underdeveloped countries set out to work from as young as four or five years old. By the age of twelve, most of them are given the responsibilities of looking after and supporting their parents who are often weak from hunger and ill health.

Deprived of any form of education from such a young age, these underprivileged children are forced to take up illegal odd jobs which often have hazardous and unsuitable working conditions. Since it is illegal for young children to work, the corporations or factories that do hire these children hide them away from the main working areas. They trap children for long stretches of time in dark and dirty rooms. In India, for example, there are children who work in factories which manufacture matches. The working hours in these factories are long and the work is hard, but what is most significant is that such factories are potential fire hazards. Not only do these children risk their lives by working, but they are also paid little money.

The United Nations encouraged countries to prohibit importing products made by children under the age of 15. We may think such measures will stop the problem of child exploitation, but the truth is they may lead to other problems. Even though the factories may be exploiting children by paying them low salaries, they do nevertheless provide them with a more or less safe working environment and proper jobs. Dismissing children from work does not necessarily mean that children will no longer work. In fact, they may end up in the hands of drug pushers or other criminals and spend their life selling drugs or stealing for a living.

A. From a, b, c and d choose the right answer: (4x10=40)

- 1- The best title for this passage is
- | | |

VI- Reading Comprehension and Summary Making (160 Marks)

160

Read the following passage carefully, then answer the questions below:

Every time you take a breath, you are inhaling Earth's atmosphere. You cannot see, smell, or taste Earth's atmosphere. It is the air all around you. Other planets also have an atmosphere. An atmosphere is a blanket of gases that wraps around a planet or any other object in space.

Earth's atmosphere is made up of a mix of gases called air. Air contains more nitrogen than any other gas. Nitrogen makes up 78 percent of the air. Oxygen, the gas that is most important for keeping you alive, makes up 21 percent. Earth is the only planet to have so much oxygen in its atmosphere. Water vapour and other gases are also present in small amounts in Earth's atmosphere. The pull of gravity holds the atmosphere in place. Gravity is the force that also keeps you from floating away from Earth.

Although air has weight, you cannot feel it. All the air in the atmosphere presses downward. This weight is called atmospheric pressure which depends on how much gas is in the atmosphere. The higher you go, the less air there is and the lower the atmospheric pressure gets. The atmosphere is heaviest and the atmospheric pressure highest close to Earth. Differences in air temperature close to Earth form areas of high and low pressure. Warm air is light and rises upwards. It makes low-pressure areas. Cold air is heavy and sinks. It makes high-pressure areas.

Air in the atmosphere is always moving. You can feel air blowing on your face. You can see air scattering autumn leaves and making tree branches sway. Moving air is called wind. The wind blows where areas of high and low atmospheric pressure meet. As warm air rises, cold air rushes in to take its place. Big areas of high and low atmospheric pressure cause storms. Thunderstorms often occur where big areas of high and low pressure come together. Huge thunderclouds form in these places. Water vapour in the atmosphere makes clouds. Water vapour is a gas. As the gas cools, it turns to liquid water. The water falls to Earth as rain or snow.

VI- Reading Comprehension and Summary Making (160 Marks)

Read the following passage carefully, then answer the questions below:

160

Every time you take a breath, you are inhaling Earth's atmosphere. You cannot see, smell, or taste Earth's atmosphere. It is the air all around you. Other planets also have an atmosphere. An atmosphere is a blanket of gases that wrap around a planet or any other object in space.

Earth's atmosphere is made up of a mix of gases called air. Air contains more nitrogen than any other gas. Nitrogen makes up 78 percent of the air. Oxygen, the gas that is most important for keeping you alive, makes up 21 percent. Earth is the only planet to have so much oxygen in its atmosphere. Water vapour and other gases are also present in small amounts in Earth's atmosphere. The pull of gravity holds the atmosphere in place. Gravity is the force that also keeps you from floating away from Earth.

Although air has weight, you cannot feel it. All the air in the atmosphere presses downward. This weight is called atmospheric pressure which depends on how much gas is in the atmosphere. The higher you go, the less air there is and the lower the atmospheric pressure gets. The atmosphere is heaviest and the atmospheric pressure highest close to Earth. Differences in air temperature close to Earth form areas of high and low pressure. Warm air is light and rises upwards. It makes low-pressure areas. Cold air is heavy and sinks. It makes high-pressure areas.

Air in the atmosphere is always moving. You can feel air blowing on your face. You can see air scattering autumn leaves and making tree branches sway. Moving air is called wind. The wind blows where areas of high and low atmospheric pressure meet. As warm air rises, cold air rushes in to take its place. Big areas of high and low atmospheric pressure cause storms. Thunderstorms often occur where big areas of high and low pressure come together. Huge thunderclouds form in these places. Water vapour in the atmosphere makes clouds. Water vapour is a gas. As the gas cools, it turns to liquid water. The water falls to Earth as rain or snow.

A) From a, b, c and d, choose the correct answer: (6X15=90 Marks)

31- The best title for this passage could be

- a- Jet Airplane Flights
- b- Causes Of Winds
- c- A Layer Cake Of Air
- d- The Earth's Atmosphere

32- The underlined word Its in paragraph (2) refers to.....

- a- Earth
- b- Cold air
- c- Oxygen
- d- Another gas

33- The word sway in paragraph (4) means

- a- to turn to liquid
- b- to swing back and forth
- c- to keep alive
- d- to get together

34- The word scattering in paragraph (4) is the opposite in meaning to

- a- getting slower
- b- floating away

- b- only colourless gases
- c- nitrogen and water vapour
- d- clouds and nitrogen

36- The main idea in paragraph (3) is

- a- the layers of the atmosphere
- b- winds blowing
- c- the weight of air
- d- water vapour

B) Answer the following questions: (3 x 10=30 Marks)

37- What holds the atmosphere around the Earth?

The pull of gravity holds the atmosphere in place.

38- How is the atmospheric pressure explained?

Weight of the air and how much gas is there./Cold air is heavy and sinks which makes high-pressure areas.

39- Why is oxygen described as the most important gas?

It is most important because it keeps us alive.

Any reasonable answer related to the text is accepted

C) Summary Making (40 marks)

In FOUR sentences of your own, summarize paragraph "4", in an answer to the following question:

How are storms formed?

The summary should include the following points:

- When high and low atmospheric pressure meet, the wind blows.
- Warm air rises, cold air goes down.
- Thunderstorms often happen where big areas of high and low pressure come together.
- Huge thunderclouds form in these places.

For centuries, the tallest buildings were made of stone. The base, or lower walls, of a tall building had to be very thick in order to support the upper walls. The taller the building was, the thicker the lower walls had to be. In this sense, it was difficult to make real skyscrapers possible.

It took two important technological advancements to make real skyscrapers possible. The first advancement was the mass production of iron and steel. The second was the production of lightweight metal beams. In 1880s, architects started using these beams to support the walls of buildings.

Using metal beams has a lot of advantages. These buildings with metal beams didn't need thick walls at the base, so they could be much taller. Besides, the building walls were thinner, and they could have more windows, which made the rooms much more pleasant. With thin lower walls, there was more room for stores and offices on the ground floor. It was also faster to build with iron and steel than with stone.

However, there were some problems that architects and engineers had to solve. How would people get to the top floor of a tall building? The solution, of course, was "lift". By 1880s, there were lifts run by electricity, which were fast and light enough to use in skyscrapers. Actually, they were developed at just the right time. They also had to figure out a way to get water to all the floors. They had to prevent the buildings from moving too much in the wind. In addition, they wanted to make the buildings as beautiful as possible. Over the years, many problems connected to high-rise buildings were solved, and buildings got taller and taller.

In fact, skyscrapers have become one of the remarkable features of modernization in famous cities throughout the world. If you want to see the best example of such a thing, look at Burj Khalifa in Dubai. The question is "do people want to work and live that far above the ground?"

Read the following passage carefully, then answer the questions below:

A few minutes ago, walking back from lunch, I started to cross the street when I heard the sound of a coin dropping. It wasn't much but, as I turned, my eyes caught the heads of several other people turning too. A woman had dropped what appeared to be a dime. The tinkling sound of a coin dropping on pavement is an attention-getter. It can be nothing more than a penny. Whatever the coin is, no one ignores the sound of it. It got me thinking about sounds again. We are besieged by so many sounds that attract the most attention.

People in New York City seldom turn to look when a fire engine, a police car or an ambulance comes screaming along the street. When I'm in New York, I'm a New Yorker. I don't turn either. Like the natives, I hardly hear a siren there.

At home in my little town in Connecticut, it's different. The distant loud noise of a police car, an emergency vehicle or a fire siren brings me to my feet if I'm seated and brings me to the window if I'm in bed. It's the quietest sounds that have most effect on us, not the loudest. In the middle of the night, I can hear a dripping tap a hundred yards away through three closed doors. I've been hearing little creaking noises and sounds which my imagination turns into footsteps in the middle of the night for twenty-five years in our house. How come I never hear those sounds in the daytime?

I'm quite clear in my mind what the good sounds are and what the bad sounds are. I can't stand whistling, for instance. I used to think of it as the mark of a happy worker but lately I've been associating the whistler with a nervous person making annoying noises. The tapping of my typewriter as the keys hit the paper is a lovely sound to me. I often like the sound of what I write better than the looks of it.

A) Choose the correct answer from a, b, c and d: (4X3 =12)

1. The main idea of the first paragraph is.....
 - a) the typewriter sound
 - b) the alarm of the fire
 - c) bad sounds

Read the following passage carefully, then answer the questions below:

A few minutes ago, walking back from lunch, I started to cross the street when I heard the sound of a coin dropping. It wasn't much but, as I turned, my eyes caught the heads of several other people turning too. A woman had dropped what appeared to be a dime. The tinkling sound of a coin dropping on pavement is an attention-getter. It can be nothing more than a penny. Whatever the coin is, no one ignores the sound of it. It got me thinking about sounds again. We are besieged by so many sounds that attract the most attention.

People in New York City seldom turn to look when a fire engine, a police car or an ambulance comes screaming along the street. When I'm in New York, I'm a New Yorker. I don't turn either. Like the natives, I hardly hear a siren there.

At home in my little town in Connecticut, it's different. The distant loud noise of a police car, an emergency vehicle or a fire siren brings me to my feet if I'm seated and brings me to the window if I'm in bed. It's the quietest sounds that have most effect on us, not the loudest. In the middle of the night, I can hear a dripping tap a hundred yards away through three closed doors. I've been hearing little creaking noises and sounds which my imagination turns into footsteps in the middle of the night for twenty-five years in our house. How come I never hear those sounds in the daytime?

I'm quite clear in my mind what the good sounds are and what the bad sounds are. I can't stand whistling, for instance. I used to think of it as the mark of a happy worker but lately I've been associating the whistler with a nervous person making annoying noises. The tapping of my typewriter as the keys hit the paper is a lovely sound to me. I often like the sound of what I write better than the looks of it.

A) Choose the correct answer from a, b, c and d: (4X3 =12)

1. The main idea of the first paragraph is.....
 - a) the typewriter sound
 - b) the alarm of the fire
 - c) bad sounds
 - d) The tinkling sound of a coin
2. Based on the passage, we understand that
 - a) sounds can be harmful or amusing
 - b) The siren of the ambulance is annoying
 - c) Fire engine is helpful
 - d) the tapping of the typewriter is a lovely sound
3. The underlined pronoun it in the first paragraph refers to.....
 - a) penny
 - b) pavement
 - c) sound
 - d) street

4. The underlined word besieged in the first paragraph means.....

- a) appeared
- b) surrounded
- c) closed
- d) dropped

B) Answer the following questions: (2X4 =8 Ms.)

5. How does the author relate to sounds at night?

He described / thought them quiet sounds.

6. What kind of sound does he find pleasant?

The tapping of his typewriter.

C) Summary-Making: (6 Marks)

In four sentences of your own, summarise the "third" paragraph in answer to the following question.

How is the writer affected by the sounds in his town?

The following point should be included in your summary:

- The writer gets annoyed by the sounds of the police car, emergency vehicles and the fire siren.
- The sounds of little creaking noises make his imagination turn into footsteps.
- The dripping tap a hundred yards away through three closed doors may even annoy him
- The tapping of the typewriter is a lovely sound to him.

VI- Reading comprehension (26Marks)

26.

Read the following passage carefully , then answer the questions below:

Fruit flies are tiny insects that are attracted to ripe or rotten and bad fruits and vegetables. The flies not only eat the fruit, but they also lay their eggs there. Scientists say that a single fruit fly can lay up to 500 eggs on the surface of a piece of fruit. They also add that within eight days, the fruit flies that hatch from these eggs are full adults that can lay their own eggs.

Although there is a chance fruit flies can carry germs on to your food, this is not very likely. Fruit flies are annoying, but they probably will not hurt you. Because they are such annoyance, however, most people want to get rid of these discomforting and pesky bugs as quickly as possible. Some people use insect repellent sprays on the fruit flies. Although this will kill the flies, it will also spread harmful poison all over your kitchen.

Luckily, there is also a completely safe way for you to get rid of fruit flies in your house. The first step is for you to remove all fruits or vegetables from your counter. Store these items in the refrigerator or in sealed and tight containers. Clean up any spilled juice or bits of food that might be on the floor. Take out the trash and empty the recycling bin. Wash any dirty dishes that are in your sink.

Next, make a trap to catch all of the remaining fruit flies in your house. First, fill a small bowl with a few tablespoons of vinegar. Then, put a piece of very ripe or rotting fruit into the vinegar. Cover the bowl very tightly with a sheet of plastic wrap and make a few small holes in the wrap with a fork. If all goes according to the plan, the flies will enter the trap through the holes but will be unable to fly back out. This trap will catch all fruit flies. You can either kill these flies or release them outdoors.

Fruit flies can be a pest (insects), but they do not have to make you crazy. With a little effort, you can get existing flies out of your house.

A) From a, b, c, and d choose the right answer: (4x3=12 Marks)

- 24- The main idea of the 2nd paragraph is
- a- fruit flies die immediately after they lay their eggs
 - b- fruit flies take a long time to grow into adults

VI- Reading Comprehension And Summary Making (70 Marks)

Read the following passage carefully, then answer the questions below:

Isaac Newton was always wondering about the things he saw around him. What holds the Moon and planets in the sky? How does a rainbow form? He uncovered basic laws of nature. He used mathematics to explain these laws and predict how objects would behave. He became one of the greatest scientists of all time .

Newton was born in Wools Thorpe, England, on December 25, 1642. He loved to build mechanical models, but he was not a good student. His mother took him out of school so that he could help run the family farm. Newton did not like farming. He liked to read and study on his own. A previous teacher knew that Newton was very smart and helped him go to the University of Cambridge. After Newton graduated, plague broke out in Cambridge. Many people got sick and died. Newton went back to the family farm for two years until the plague ended. He came up with many of his greatest ideas from 1665 to 1667 while he was alone in the countryside.

Newton went back to Cambridge and became a professor of mathematics. He built the first reflecting telescope, which uses a mirror instead of a lens. Newton invented a new kind of mathematics called calculus. Today, scientists and engineers use calculus to solve many kinds of problems. Newton came up with theories about gravity and motion. He thought that the same force pulling people and apples down to Earth keeps the Moon going around Earth and the planets going around the Sun. He used mathematics to prove his theories. Newton used a prism, a piece of glass with many sides, to study light. He found that sunlight is made up of every colour in the rainbow. He became famous for his calculus, but he did not tell many people about his theory of gravity. He was shy and modest and did not want other scientists to criticise his work. Finally his friends had him write a book about gravity and motion titled Principia Mathematica. Scientists called the book a masterpiece. Newton was honoured. When he died on March 20, 1727, he became the first scientist to be buried in Westminster Abbey in London.

Reading Comprehension And Summary Making (70 Marks)

Read the following passage carefully, then answer the questions below:

Isaac Newton was always wondering about the things he saw around him. What holds the Moon and planets in the sky? How does a rainbow form? He uncovered basic laws of nature. He used mathematics to explain these laws and predict how objects would behave. He became one of the greatest scientists of all time .

Newton was born in Wools Thorpe, England, on December 25, 1642. He loved to build mechanical models, but he was not a good student. His mother took him out of school so that he could help run the family farm. Newton did not like farming. He liked to read and study on his own. A previous teacher knew that Newton was very smart and helped him go to the University of Cambridge. After Newton graduated, plague broke out in Cambridge. Many people got sick and died. Newton went back to the family farm for two years until the plague ended. He came up with many of his greatest ideas from 1665 to 1667 while he was alone in the countryside.

Newton went back to Cambridge and became a professor of mathematics. He built the first reflecting telescope, which uses a mirror instead of a lens. Newton invented a new kind of mathematics called calculus. Today, scientists and engineers use calculus to solve many kinds of problems. Newton came up with theories about gravity and motion. He thought that the same force pulling people and apples down to Earth keeps the Moon going around Earth and the planets going around the Sun. He used mathematics to prove his theories. Newton used a prism, a piece of glass with many sides, to study light. He found that sunlight is made up of every colour in the rainbow. He became famous for his calculus, but he did not tell many people about his theory of gravity. He was shy and modest and did not want other scientists to criticise his work. Finally his friends had him write a book about gravity and motion titled Principia Mathematica. Scientists called the book a masterpiece. Newton was honoured. When he died on March 20, 1727, he became the first scientist to be buried in Westminster Abbey in London.

A) From a, b, c and d, choose the correct answer: (6X6=36)

VI- Reading Comprehension and Summary Making (120 Marks)

120

Read the following passage carefully, and then answer the questions below:

Water is the oil of the 21st century. It is the valuable thing that determines the wealth of nations. Specialists estimate that by 2020, access to drinking water could be one of the main reasons for international wars.

According to all available information, the world faces a coming up water disaster. The world's current population of 6 billion people is expected to increase to 9 billion by 2050. The United Nations estimates that if we continue to use water at today's rates, the world will face severe water shortage by 2050.

Worldwide, we are taking so much water from our rivers. But wait! If two-thirds of the Earth's surface is covered with water, why don't we have enough water to drink? Of all the water in the world, only one percent can be used in homes and in farming. The rest of the water is either salt or is frozen in polar ice. So, shouldn't global warming release some of that water? In fact, global warming will make the situation worse. Now, water is released gradually from ice and snow into rivers and lakes. If global warming melts the ice and snow, all of the water will be released at one time and most of it will go into oceans and seas.

While some countries see the water problem as a humanitarian issue, others see it as an economic one. We all need water, and some companies make a healthy profit from the situation. Denmark is one country that is taking action to protect water for the future. The Danish government has a ten-step programme to ensure the quality and quantity of water. For one thing, farmers aren't allowed to use more than 170 pesticides because these poisons leak into the water supply. Organic farming is being promoted. Organic farming does not use harmful chemicals which also can leak into water supply. Additionally, other steps are being taken to protect important underground water areas which are essential for maintaining a healthy, natural water supply.

Water shortages are an international problem. We can only hope that the nations of the world will seek a humanitarian solution so that future generations can enjoy this basic source of life.

If global warming melts the ice and snow, all of the water will be released at one time and most of it will go into oceans and seas.

While some countries see the water problem as a humanitarian issue, others see it as an economic one. We all need water, and some companies make a healthy profit from the situation. Denmark is one country that is taking action to protect water for the future. The Danish government has a ten-step programme to ensure the quality and quantity of water. For one thing, farmers aren't allowed to use more than 170 pesticides because these poisons leak into the water supply. Organic farming is being promoted. Organic farming does not use harmful chemicals which also can leak into water supply. Additionally, other steps are being taken to protect important underground water areas which are essential for maintaining a healthy, natural water supply.

Water shortages are an international problem. We can only hope that the nations of the world will seek a humanitarian solution so that future generations can enjoy this basic source of life.
