VI-Reading Comprehension (150 Marks)

150

Read the following passage carefully, and then answer the questions:

We all learn from life. When a child is born, he is not capable of doing anything. He depends on his parents for all of his needs. He starts learning everything from this very beginning .The memory keeps piling up things to be used later in life. For example, the child does not know that fire is hot and harmful until he touches it. When a person reaches an age of 50 , he/she has enjoyed almost everything in life, kids, different jobs, different relations, travelling and a lot more. The elders are ahead of us in age, experience, wisdom and maturity.

An elderly person is a kind of portable library with a lot of practical experience in it. Senior people are thus a great source of knowledge for the youngsters. They have learned all that with their own experience after hardships and sufferings. We have a golden chance to learn from them the lessons that they have already learned. We might disagree with them on certain matters but these are only a few and this is because of the changing world. However, for most of the things, their advice is always useful. There are certain things in life we consider good when we are young. As time passes, our views on them changes and we come to realise that it was not a good decision to go that way. Our elders play a vital role in selecting or rejecting such things.

If you find an elder trying to cross the road, go ahead and help. If you have senior elders in your house, spare some time for them. Our elders would really feel happy then . Sit with them. They always like to talk about their own time. Listen to them. If you are travelling in a public transport and notice seniors standing by, offer your seat to them. They will really feel happy and respected. While on job, senior employees definitely have more experience for that job and can help us a lot. If you are going in your car and notice an elder walking by, you can offer a pick up if the destination is the same for both of you.

Finally, the simple rule is; everyone wants to be respected. If we do not respect our elders, we should not expect our younger would respect us when the time comes and we need their help. They took care of us when we were kids and it is our time to pay back when they reach that stage of life. They expect respect and help from young ones.

VI-Reading Comprehension (150 Marks)

Read the following passage carefully, and then answer the questions:

Newspapers belong to the oldest methods of getting information to the public and keeping people well-informed on important events. They can cover more news in detail than other media. Producing a newspaper is a demanding work as it requires speed and good organisation. Reporters, editors and photographers always face deadlines. Newspapers have two formats: standard newspapers and tabloids. Standard newspapers are large pages. Generally, these newspapers are more serious and present more facts than tabloids. Tabloids are smaller pages. They concentrate on thrilling stories and often publish rumours about famous people combined with big pictures.

Newspapers can be divided into three basic types: dailies, weeklies and special interest newspapers. Daily newspapers print world, national and local news. Many of them also have a section about events that happen in the area. Sunday newspapers have additional features and more pages than weekday editions. Topics like entertainment, finance or travel are included in separate sections. Weekly papers are distributed in a smaller area and have news that is local and personal. Special interest newspapers are for a special part of the population, like Hispanics in America.

The first step in printing a newspaper is to collect enough information. Reporters do a lot of research to gather the facts. Most reporters only provide information and the basic facts of a story. Writing and Editing is the second step. This is usually done by news editors. They write stories on computers that are connected together. The finished story goes to a copy editor, who is responsible for correcting spelling and making the story easier to read. The third step is creating a layout. The layout shows where the text, photos, advertisements etc. should appear on the page. The last step is printing the newspaper when the completed paper is transferred electronically from computers to the printing press.

The invention of computers in the 20th century has changed the way newspapers are made. Today, reporters can save time by sending the main facts of their stories by e-mail. Editors can easily make corrections with spell checkers. Increasing costs of publishing, however, have also driven many newspapers out of business. A newspaper cannot exist without advertisements. They pay for at least 75 % of all costs. Newspapers carry two types of ads. Display ads can be as large as a full page and can include illustrations and photos. Classified ads have only a few lines in which people offer goods and services or look for jobs and apartments.

VI-Reading Comprehension (150 Marks)

Read the following passage carefully, and then answer the questions:

Newspapers belong to the oldest methods of getting information to the public and keeping people well-informed on important events. They can cover more news in detail than other media. Producing a newspaper is a demanding work as it requires speed and good organisation. Reporters, editors and photographers always face deadlines. Newspapers have two formats: standard newspapers and tabloids. Standard newspapers are large pages. Generally, these newspapers are more serious and present more facts than tabloids. Tabloids are smaller pages. They concentrate on thrilling stories and often publish rumours about famous people combined with big pictures.

Newspapers can be divided into three basic types: dailies, weeklies and special interest newspapers. Daily newspapers print world, national and local news. Many of them also have a section about events that happen in the area. Sunday newspapers have additional features and more pages than weekday editions. Topics like entertainment, finance or travel are included in separate sections. Weekly papers are distributed in a smaller area and have news that is local and personal. Special interest newspapers are for a special part of the population, like Hispanics in America.

The first step in printing a newspaper is to collect enough information. Reporters do a lot of research to gather the facts. Most reporters only provide information and the basic facts of a story. Writing and Editing is the second step. This is usually done by news editors. They write stories on computers that are connected together. The finished story goes to a copy editor, who is responsible for correcting spelling and making the story easier to read. The third step is creating a layout. The layout shows where the text, photos, advertisements etc. should appear on the page. The last step is printing the newspaper when the completed paper is transferred electronically from computers to the printing press.

The invention of computers in the 20th century has changed the way newspapers are made. Today, reporters can save time by sending the main facts of their stories by e-mail. Editors can easily make corrections with spell checkers. Increasing costs of publishing, however, have also driven many newspapers out of business. A newspaper cannot exist without advertisements. They pay for at least 75 % of all costs. Newspapers carry two types of ads. Display ads can be as large as a full page and can include illustrations and photos. Classified ads have only a few lines in which people offer goods and services or look for jobs and apartments.

VI- Reading Comprehension (100 Marks)

Read the following passage , then answer the questions below:

Have you ever flown ? Did you fly to another country to study English? How do you feel about flying? People who have to fly all the time for business find it boring. People who fly only once in a while are excited. However, some people feel only terror when they board an aeroplane. They suffer from a phobia, an illogical fear .

If you are afraid of poisonous spiders, this is logical. If you are afraid of all spiders, even harmless ones, this is a phobia because it is illogical. Some people have phobias about height, being shut up in a small area, or being in a large open area. It is not logical to be afraid of these things when there is no danger, but a phobia is not logical.

Fear of flying is another phobia. We always hear about a plane crash, but we don't hear about the millions of flights every year that are safe. Riding in a car is thirty times more dangerous than flying, but most of us are not afraid every time we get into a car. It is not logical to be afraid of flying, but research shows that about 12 percent of people have this fear.

People with a phobia about flying are afraid for one or more of these reasons. They are afraid of heights. They avoid high places, and if they are in a high-rise building, they don't look out of the windows. They might be afraid of being in an enclosed place like an elevator or a tunnel on a highway. When they get on an aeroplane, they can't get out until the end of the flight, and the flight might last several hours. Maybe they are afraid of the crowds and all the noise and people rushing around at an airport. This particularly bothers older people. Some people are afraid of the unknown. They don't understand the technology of flying and can't believe that a huge aeroplane can stay up in the air. Others are afraid of losing control. They need to control every situation they are in. When they drive a car, they have some chance of avoiding an accident. In a plane, they have no control over anything. It bothers them to give up control to the pilot and the rest of the crew.

There is help for all these people. There are special classes in which people learn how to control their fear. They probably can't lose it, they can learn to control it. Then they can fly when they need to, even though they probably won't enjoy it. So if you have this kind of fear, consider such classes and your next aeroplane trip would be a joy.

VI- Reading Comprehension and Summary Making (100Marks)

Read the following passage carefully, then answer the questions below:

Human beings are plagued by all kinds of diseases and millions of people die from them. Many of these diseases such as diabetes, polio, cough and diphtheria can be fatal and in the past, people used to die from them. However, with modern technology and a lot of research, scientists and doctors have come up with various ways to cure these diseases, and consequently, many lives are saved. Animal research plays a crucial role in scientists' understanding of diseases and in the development of effective medical treatments. Animals are biologically similar to humans in many ways and they are vulnerable to over 200 of the same health problems. This makes them an effective model for researchers to study.

In doing the medical research, doctors have come face to face with many problems. One such problem is the opposition that comes from animal activists. They are against the inhuman treatment of animals. They argue that in conducting their medical research, doctors put animals through a very painful process and this should be stopped. On the other hand ,supporters of the use of animals in experiments, such as the British Royal Society, argue that virtually medical achievements in the 20th century relied on the use of animals in some way.

To get their message across, animal activists are even willing to resort to the use of violence and force. Many animal protection groups, like the Animal Liberation Front (ALF), have broken into laboratories illegally to 'rescue' animals. They take away whatever animals they can find and free them. These people also make their case by threatening the researchers and destroying their medical equipment.

Researchers have come up with many cures in the process of working with animals and on animals. Organ transplants are so common today, but we forget they became only possible after they were tested on animals. Doctors were able to come up with a cure for river blindness, a disease that affects millions of people in South America and Africa. Animal experiments succeeded to predict the causes of many diseases. The first successful blood *transfusion was performed on a dog by Richard Lower in 1666 and perfected in dogs by 1907.Thanks to decades of research on animals, survival from cancer has doubled in the last 40 years, giving thousands of people more time with their loved ones.
